The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the combination of Henley et al 2002/0106870, Bachrach et al, and Murphy et al.

Bachrach et al discloses formation of a-Si layer 20 [0056] on glass substrate 5 [0058], implantation of hydrogen within donor substrate 70 [0050], bonding of donor substrate to layer 20 and controlled cleaving to separate donor wafer from the bonded structure leaving a transferred layer of Si on glass substrate 5 [0065]. The reference does not disclose use of laser in the controlled cleaving process or smoothing by annealing and polishing.

Henley et al discloses chemical mechanical polishing following laser initiated controlled cleaving process of a hydrogen implanted donor wafer [0074, 0077, 0060, 0034].

Murphy et al discloses annealing and polishing to smooth a wafer subsequent to splitting after hydrogen implantation.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to combine the teachings of Henley et al and Murphy et al with those of Bachrach et al to enable smoothing of the transferred layer.

Bachrach et al discloses that the thickness of the donor portion 85 is determined by the depth of the implant process used to generate dislocations 75 [0067]. The disclosed implant energy and depth overlaps that recited in claims 6 and 7 [0050]. The implant energy and implant dose disclosed by Henley et al overlaps that recited in claim 6 [0026].

Art Unit: 2823

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
